

OLOOLAISER SCHOOL

P. O. BOX 71-00208 NGONG HILLS

Tel. 0723720220

Email: oololaiser@gmail.com

Website: <https://oololaiser.sc.ke>

Dear Admission Committee,

RE: COUNSELOR RECOMMENDATION FOR BRIAN TIMAYO PARSOMOI, ADMISSION NUMBER 7717

I first took notice of Brian when, in my role as Dean of Studies, I released the first-term examination results for the entire school and was immediately astonished by his exemplary performance. Since that moment I have walked closely with him throughout his four years at Oololaiser High School (a selective institution that admits students from the top five percent of Kenya Certificate of Primary Education candidates) in my role as his mentor and school counselor. I have observed his steady transformation from a boy into the young man he is today, and at every stage he has diligently honed his leadership, social, and growth-oriented competencies. His disciplined, focused, and determined disposition has enabled him to achieve significant accomplishments both within the school and beyond.

When I released the first-term results in 2021, an anomalous pattern emerged in the Grade 9 cohort: a student named Brian dominated the list, not only placing first among the 250 pupils but also leading five of his eight subjects. In subsequent examinations his performance proved even more remarkable, consistently outstripping his peers throughout the four years without any regression. In all my years of teaching I have never supervised a pupil of comparable caliber. On one occasion I summoned him to my office to inquire about his method; he acknowledged that, though naturally bright, his results were the product of disciplined effort: rising an hour before other students to exploit the quiet, studying late into the night to review the day's lessons, completing additional assignments, and making frequent visits to the school library to consult supplementary texts.

Brian's tenure as captain of clubs and societies and as head of academics afforded the teaching staff the smoothest operational period Oololaiser has ever experienced. He instituted several constructive reforms that revived once-dormant clubs into vibrant, competitive bodies whose projects progressed to and won at the national level. He devised a comprehensive meeting schedule for all seventeen clubs and appointed a supervising teacher to each, thereby eliminating time wastage and the previous lack of accountability during club activities. As head of academics, he carried out a meticulous survey of the student body to identify academic challenges, then collaborated with teachers to draft and implement pragmatic solutions. Those interventions enabled the school to develop student-centered programs expressly designed to bolster academic performance and ease a burden on the teachers.

Everyone at school loved Brian for his friendly nature and constant willingness to help. In Grade 9, he was initially a quiet boy with limited social skills, but his academic strength made many students gravitate towards him as they sought his advice. By the second term, he had become more at ease with people and noticeably more confident, even offering study tips to senior students. Often found surrounded by peers seeking help to balance their academics, he identified those who struggled, helped them improve their study habits, and even designed personalized timetables for them. His readiness to assist and cheerful demeanor won him many friends among students, teachers, and support staff; teachers praised him in the staff room and the dining staff admired his discipline. He became everyone's favorite and his popularity eased his campaign for captain in charge of clubs and societies.

When Brian left Oloolaiser, it felt as though an essential piece of our community had been taken away. We deeply miss his remarkable leadership, warm friendliness, strong work ethic, and constant readiness to help. We take pride in knowing he will bring these virtues to your institution, where under your guidance, his potential will be refined into even greater leadership, integrity, and service. I recommend him without reservation, knowing he will excel and fulfil, even exceed expectations.

Yours sincerely,

Ms. Pasomi Mucha,
School Counselor.